

MUSIC - A WORD INSPIRED BY THE WORLD

Our data are based on 10 bestselling artists from each of 5 most common music genres. We took 20 most popular songs of each of them and analysed the amount of words in them, a distribution due to genre and most frequently used words.

Hip-hop and rap artists definitely top the list when it comes to the amount of words included in their singles. Let's take a look at the top of the top of them - Eminem. The author of "Rap God" is considered by many as someone described in the title and there are powerful arguments for that. Not only has he made many chart-topping albums but also is the author of the song which retains the title for the most words in a hit single and it's above mentioned "Rap God". With this song Eminem had also set a record of the fastest rapping by him which he beat in "Majesty" ft. Nicki Minaj and excelled himself in "Godzilla" by sounding 10.65 syllables per second.

R. Kelly dominates in the average amount of words per song for R&B genre. When he was young he had real difficulties at school because of an advanced dyslexia. He couldn't really read or write and he has still managed to become one of the '90s top earners.

The word cloud of the most often used words for pop is full of the ones which character feelings such as love, affection and infatuation. Taylor Swift rules here not only in the context of our chart, but she's a worldwide queen of love songs as many of her hits come from this theme. In this genre the diversity of figures is not very remarkable but the actual words are yet. You only need to listen a few artists to note how various are the ways to describe human feelings.

Even though rock is the kind of music with relevantly harder sound, it turns out it's still popular to include there delicate topics like love. However, the range of topics raised in rock pieces is considerably wider than in pop ones. Through the decades, the finest musicians and bands, e.g. the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Queen, Pink Floyd, showed their vocal and writing talents by giving extraordinary performances and releasing impressive songs.

Country music is known for its ballads and dance tunes with simple form, folk lyrics, and harmonies accompanied by instruments such as banjos, fiddles, harmonicas and many types of guitar. It's a mixture of many styles, springing from many roots and sprouting many new branches to create a complicated chorus of American voices, joining together to tell an American story.

The music is a world full of diversity, creativity and feelings. Despite that fact, we can still see some patterns and predominant subject area which is simply love. It shows how prevalent thing it is, no matter if you're a basic person or world-famous superstar.
